

L'interprétation au pluriel
Imaginaires n°13 / 2009

issn 1270-931X - isbn 978-2-915271-32-4 22 €

This book contains some of the papers given at the conference entitled “The Plurality of Interpretation” held at the University of Reims, France, in March 2006. We asked the participants to come up with solutions to the problems we ask ourselves over here in Reims in the English department. These problems have obviously to do with teaching and research. In other words, we asked the participants if they thought they could help us with the questions we are daily confronted with in our job. We added that we would be extremely grateful with anything they might propose, be it practical tips or abstract theories.

commander l'ouvrage :
sur Internet : <http://www.lcdpu.fr>
chez votre libraire

Table des matières

Daniel Thomières The Plurality of Interpretation in Questions, Suggestions and Classifications	9
Jean-Jacques Leclercle Interpretation as done, or as doing?	17
Simone Rinzler Interpreting committed discourse: towards a theory of nonfiction	27
Sabine Coelsch-Foizner Infinite Interpretations and Exegetic Frames	47
Aleksei Semenenko Translation as Interpretation, Interpretation as Translation	61
Katarzyna Radolińska The Misty Halo of Joseph Conrad – Heart of Darkness and the Philosophy of Jacques Derrida	77
Bent Sørensen Constructing and Deconstructing Racism in Conrad	87
Camelia Elias Orlando's Stake: Spectacles of Interpretation in Sally Potter's Adaptation of Virginia Woolf	97
Daniel Thomières "The reader may choose among these theories": The Impossibility of Choice in The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne	113
Péter Csató Sacredness and interpretability: The case of Melville's "Bartleby the Scrivener"	125
Lucia Aiello The Quest for Meaning: Necessity and Plurality with Reference to Emily Dickinson	145
Christine Chollier, Françoise Canon-Roger A Comparison of Several Interpretations of "Snow" by Louis MacNeice	155
Article hors thème
Timothy Bewes The Literary Event: Between Destiny and Necessity	177